What you need to know and where to go to live the good life

High Art Oh, to dwell in a work of art. This art lover's fantasy is realized in Museum Tower in the heart of the Dallas Arts District. But think more Frick than Night at the Museum because the 42-story luxury high-rise is where art, culture, style, and the high life abide. Slated to open in 2010, the property's pied-à-terre and penthouse residences are going quickly, making Museum Tower the address to envy. Perhaps it has something to do with the design by renowned Los Angeles-based architect Scott Johnson. Residences in his soaring glass tower with curving sails include floor-to-ceiling glass windows, direct-access elevators, open-air terraces, and views of the Dallas skyline. The high-rise is also within steps of the Nasher Sculpture Center and Meyerson Symphony Center. Art isn't celebrated only in the traditional sense, though. Residents can brush up on the art of healthy living at the Wellness Center with the help of an in-house wellness director or enjoy the art of dining with culinary ambassador chef Stephan Pyles. To promote the art of fashion, all residents will have a personal concierge at the downtown Neiman Marcus on speed dial.

Price: Homes start at $1 million. For more information, call 214/954-1234, or visit www.museumtowerdallas.com.
